

Rookery Farm Accreditation

Organic Farmers & Growers is the primary UK organic certification body who audit our farm and hens annually to ensure we meet the high standards they require and that we comply with all EU and British Organic standards

The Soil Association is an organic certification body similar to Organic Farmers & Growers, it also audits the farm and hens annually. Soil Association standards sometimes vary from Organic Farmers & Growers on certain issues such as hen house size

We are accredited to both as some of our customers specify the Organic Farmers & Growers standard and others that of The Soil Association

Previously known as Freedom Foods, RSPCA Assured is the farm division of the RSPCA who audit our farm annually to ensure we comply with all their requirements for hen welfare

Laid In Britain was formed in 2005 from a consortium of independent egg producers who market their produce on a regional or local basis and is an extension of the arrangement offered by United Kingdom Egg Producers Association Ltd, which caters for the smaller to medium sized egg producer who wishes to have the closest contact with the end user, their customers. Laid in Britain offers the highest standards of food safety and bird welfare.

Animal Health Department of DEFRA is a government body that makes unannounced audits on us periodically to check we comply with UK and EU free range standards, placing particular emphasis on egg quality and grading procedures
